Blueprints piloted an inmate re-entry project in the Fall of 2016 designed to provide education, assessment, discharge planning and case management (post-release) to female inmates at the Washington County Correctional Facility; an estimated 95% of women at the jail are incarcerated due to drug abuse and related crimes.

Eight - 6 week sessions have been conducted so far using the Getting Ahead While Getting Out curriculum as the project’s foundational element. A Blueprints’ caseworker guided each participant in the development of her own “Future Story.” These personal stories include the plan for a successful release and goals to achieve success and independence in the community.

Blueprints offers comprehensive services upon release including housing, family literacy, job development, postsecondary transitions, and financial literacy, while providing linkages to other services including drug treatment, family reunification and transportation.

Re-Entry Program

October 2016 - September 2018

- 113 participants
- 61 graduates
- 75 participants/graduates released
- 42 engaged post-release
- 18 have secured employment
- 16 in long-term rehab programs
- 8 have stabilized housing
- 9 are back in jail (12% recidivism)